e. Personnel

(1) The personnel strength of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines and supporting units was as follows:

USMC Officers	USMC Enlisted
37	985
USN Officers	USN Enlisted
3	48

(2) Friendly Casualties.

(a) Battle Casualties. 7

(b) Non-battle Casualties.- 39

UNCLASSIFIED

NOFORN
The high number of non-battle casualties is attributed to the constant high temperatures and to normal attrition for non-battle medical reasons.

(3) Discipline, Law and Order. No problems encountered.

(4) Burial and Graves Registrations. None

(5) Morale. Morale was maintained at a high degree due to the low number of the battle casualties, the length of the operation was short in duration, the objectives were reasonable and realistic.

f. Logistics. No logistical problems were encountered.

(1) The logistical support activities proved extremely successful and this was due primarily to the conscientious leadership displayed by the LSA Commander.

(2) Overland transportation was utilized where possible to free helicopters for operational support. This was made possible by the mine-sweeping conducted by the Combat Engineers, which allowed continuous surface logistical support throughout the majority of each day's action.

(3) Careful monitoring of support capabilities and preplanned procurement allowed this organization to have "On Hand" the necessary material to meet operating needs.

g. Communications. Movement to the Operation Area from the HUE-PIHU BAI Combat Base was conducted with a minimum disruption in communications. Command elements evolved normal command echelonment during this displacement.

(1) Radio. Normal internal and external circuits were maintained in support of this operation with the emphasis being placed on the Regimental Tactical Net (FM) and the Battalion Tactical Net (FM). To assist in the maintenance of the Regimental Tactical Net, due to the distance, a relay station was established by Regiment at PIHU BAI on Hill 180. The Regimental Command Circuit was only activated when the radio relay circuit was interrupted.

(2) Radio Relay. Upon arriving in the operation area the already existing radio relay circuits, left by 2nd Battalion, 4th Marines were expanded from two channels to five. This allowed for two common user channels, Battalion to Regiment S-3 Hotline, Battalion to Regimental FSCC Hotline and a covered teletype circuit. Due in part to, distance and an unfavorable terrain profile, the radio relay voice circuits were not at all clear as would normally have have been desirable. However, these circuits were believed adequate and released personnel and radio equipment for other tasks. The teletype circuit was definitely hampered by a lack of operation terminal equipment at the Regimental terminal and radio interference from 8th Radio Research (USA) at the PHU BAI Complex. The combination of these two problem areas constituted an unsatisfactory teletype circuit during this operation.

NOFORN

(3) Wire. As the Battalion Command Post and the LSA were combined into one area, this battalion assumed the maintenance responsibilities of both unit wire systems. Wire was also effectively employed to the base camps of the Rifle Companies. These lines were from two to three thousand meters in length and required minimum trouble shooting time.

h. Lessons Learned.

(1) Item # 1. Inadequate Vietnamese (ARVN) support for Marine/ARVN Combined (MAC) Operations in connection with Operation BEAVER.

(2) Discussion. Operation BEAVER emphasized a mission which included Search and Destroy, VC Denial of the lowlands, etc. The mission had in addition to the above, a critical requirement of resources control which included the withdrawal of all foodstuffs, animals and any other resources that might be of use to the VC. In this connection a coordinated operation utilizing an ARVN Battalion, PF's and intelligence unit from the PHUONG DIEN District, was initiated.

Lengthy detailed conferences were conducted on the Sub-Sector level with the Army Advisor and the District Chief on matters of ARVN/Vietnamese participation. Marine support on this aspect of operation BEAVER, included fixed wing support, helilifts of 2 Marine Rifle Companies, LZ prep by artillery, a Search and Destroy Operation by a third Marine Rifle Company, overhead support by a Tank Platoon, engineer sweep teams, and a displacement by helicopter of a Battalion Command Group. The ARVN agreed to provide 10 trucks, 4 H-37 helicopters and RF & PF personnel to conduct Search mission and to provide security for the civilian personnel who were escorted into the CO BI-THANH TAN Area for the purpose of collecting personal effects and food stuffs, animals and such other personal type items.

The above operation was highly successful from the stand point of Marine Corps participation and a complete bust on the part of the ARVN. The complete failure of the District Chief to provide support (trucks, helicopters); lack of control over the PF's in accompanying civilians

NO-FURN

UNCLASSIFIED

through the hamlets, and the absence of any Search effort contributed primarily to the above. The PF's advanced only to a point of the first hamlet in which they remained throughout the operation. Upon termination of the day's activities, there was evidence of looting/pillaging on the part of the PF's by the number of chickens, ducks and other food stuffs which they had taken for personal consumption.

In addition to the above, the District Chief's inability to control the local merchants overcharging the Marines for local products (eg, ice, cokes) indicated an obvious unwillingness to cooperate. The above comments are more meaningful in light of the fact that the entire resources control operation was conducted only after the insistence of the District Chief.

(3) Recommendation.

(a) That future Marine/ARVN Operations in this area have assurance from the 1st ARVN Division/Province Chief that the ARVN Support will be forthcoming.

(b) That the obvious lack of concern for the overcharging of Marines in the PHUONG DIEN District be brought to the attention of the CG, "I" Corps in view of the spiraling inflationary trends.

(c) That all future Marine/ARVN Operations regardless of size have Province/Sector level liaison.

INTELLIGENCE

1. Enemy Situation

a. The enemy situation was as follows:

(1) During 1 - 6 July there was negative VC activity in the immediate DONG HA - CAM LO Area. Local guerrillas operating in the adjacent areas (ARVN areas of responsibility) harassed vehicular traffic on Route # 1 with occasional sniper fire. VC elements in the guise of civilians, moved throughout the area in order to gain intelligence data on friendly unit dispositions and methods of operation. Reconnaissance teams, operating to the north and southwest of the CAM LO area (YD 0065 to YD 0864 and YD 0546 respectively) established contact with the enemy units. On several occasions recon teams could not be inserted because of enemy activity in the LZ (YD 0065 to YD 0864 grids). The size of enemy units varied in number from an estimated squad to company size units.

(2) For the enemy situation during the period 7 - 31 July: See After Action Report, Operation HASTINGS (Tab C to Appendix II).

b. Enemy units which operated near our TAOR:

(1) DONG HA:

At 1350H "H" Company departed GIA LE by convoy. At 1530H Elements of "H" Company arrived at DONG HA airfield. At 1822H a platoon from Recon Group "B" was inserted by helo at YD 082644. At 1835H Recon Plat in contact with approximately 50 VC, requested extraction from HLZ. At 1923H Recon Plat extracted successfully. At 1925H 4th Marine Regiment directed 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines (Rear) to prepare one platoon for the mission of security for 4th Marines Radio Relay on Hill 285, the platoon to be heli-lifted from LZ HANNA (GIA LE) at 020700H and to be under OpCon of 4th Marines. 3rd Platoon "G" Company was assigned the mission. There were 6 squad size patrols, 10 squad size ambushes, 20 outposts, and 20 listening posts employed. Three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

b. 2 July - At 0640H 4 helo's arrived at LZ HANNA to lift 3rd Platoon, "G" Company to Hill 285; lift was completed at 0745H. At 1825H 1st Platoon, Recon Group BRAVO inserted at YD 080623 and made contact with an unknown number of VC in vicinity of YD 080623 while attempting to enter LZ. Insertion was compromised because of VC near the LZ. Fixed wing aircraft were requested to conduct an air strike. Results of air strike: 1 VC KIA (confirmed). There was one recon platoon insertion, and one extraction; six squad size patrols, 9 squad size ambushes, 18 outposts and 18 listening posts were employed; three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

c. 3 July - At 2305H "E" Company noted suspected enemy movement in vicinity of YD 125584; the area was illuminated with negative results. There was one recon platoon insertion, one extraction; seven squad size patrols, 11 squad size ambushes, 20 outposts, and 20 listening posts were employed; three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

d. 4 July - There were two recon platoon insertions and two extractions; nine squad size patrols, 10 squad size ambushes, 18 listening posts and 18 outposts were employed; three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

e. 5 July - At 1115H recon unit observed 12 VC moving north dressed in green camouflaged uniforms carrying packs and weapons in vicinity XD 998571. Artillery fired 20-155mm rounds on target. A UN-1E gun ship flew over the area to make a damage assessment and received ground fire; the UN-1E returned fire with 2.75" rockets. Results of Action: unknown; however, it was estimated that the majority of the VC were either KIA or WIA. At 1330H CH-46's on recon flight took small arms fire from an unknown number of VC in vicinity of YD 055503. Fire was returned with .50 cal and 7.62mm. UN-1E gun ship was requested and expended 2.75" rockets and 7.62mm rounds. Results of contact: casualties undetermined and target area left in flames. At 1715H recon unit heard one carbine round about 200 meters west of their position (XD 994454) which was believed to be a signal; at the time of the carbine shot, the unit heard movement of 10-15 VC from the east; then another carbine shot was heard from east and movement from the west.

Recon unit requested extraction from LZ in vicinity of YD 896548. As the CH-46's passed over the VC position 8-10 thermite grenades were dropped igniting the entire area; as the helos were turning out of the area, they drew small arms fire. UH-1E gun ships were called in and expended 6000 rounds of 7.62, 72 rounds of 2.75" rockets and 400 20mm rounds into the target. Recon unit was successfully extracted at 1845H with negative casualties. It was believed VC were attempting to surround and attack the recon unit's OP. Results of the air strike: Thermite fires uncovered a long trench with gun positions. VC casualties could not be estimated due to the fire. There were two recon platoon insertions and two extractions: nine squad size patrols, 10 squad size ambushes, 19 outposts, and 19 listening posts were employed; three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

f. 6 July - At 1300H "F" Company received 2 sniper rounds from vicinity of YD 187588; fire was returned with 40 rounds of small arms and VC broke contact in an unknown direction. There were 2 recon platoon insertions and extractions; nine squad size patrols, 10 squad size ambushes, 18 outposts and 18 listening posts were employed; three scout sniper teams from 4th Marines were assigned to this battalion.

g. During the period 7 - 31 July, See After Action Report, Operation HASTINGS (Tab C to Appendix II).

10. Training. Due to operational commitments, only a minimum of training was conducted. SECTION VI

COMMUNICATION - ELECTRONICS

1. General

a. Upon arrival at DONG HA, the Battalion Communications Platoon established and maintained both internal and external communications circuits. Initially, wire communications were established between the Battalion Command Post and the U.S. Air Force at DONG HA; this allowed for two telephone channels to HUE, PHU BAI, and DA NANG. These channels were not considered acceptable due to technical difficulties with which the Air Force was unable to cope.

b. In order to expand the external communications system, a Communication Central, TSC-15, was activated to provide a voice and teletype circuit between DONG HA and the Fourth Marines at PHU BAI. This system proved to be very unstable and, therefore, not acceptable. Initially, the problem lay in insufficient equipment to establish the teletype circuit. Additional equipment was obtained from the 4th Marines. However, after one more equipment failure insufficient equipment remained to continue this circuit. Both technical and equipment assistance was requested from 3rd MarDiv; this was quickly received and efforts were again made to reestablish the circuit. After repeated unsuccessful efforts to establish a stable and reliable circuit to PHU BAI, it was decided to establish this circuit direct to the Third MarDiv at DA NANG. Although the circuit was becoming more dependable and acceptable, an unusual number of equipment failures began to occur. Additional equipment and technical assistance were employed at both terminal units until the equipment problems began to settle down. On or about 14 July the problems with this circuit apparently were resolved. From this point on the only difficulty encountered was with frequencies and was not considered to be beyond acceptable limits. It should be noted that experience with the high frequency, single side band communications equipment in and around the PHU BAI area has constantly been unacceptable. It has always been easier to establish and maintain this type of radio communications with DA NANG than with PHU BAI. No satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon can be advanced.

c. On 16 July, the battalion went to the field to participate in Operation HASTINGS; a normal combat command post communications system was operated during the period 16-31 July with no unusual problems.

c. The delivery of the Radio Sets, AN/PRC-25 was anticipated during the period 1-31 July 1966. However, only the two vehicular mounted radios, AN/MRC-109, have been received.

6. Supporting Forces

a. During the period 7-14 July 1966, "H" Btry, 3rd Bn, 12th Marines reinforced with 2 howitzers of "M" Btry, 4th Bn, 12th Marines provided direct artillery support from their position at CAM 10. Their mission was to support reconnaissance efforts west of DONG HA and to provide defensive fires for the air field at DONG HA. During this period, the battery fired 2000 rounds on 250 observed and unobserved missions and was considered effective in their support. With the arrival of Task Force DELTA "H" Battery joined the other batteries of 3rd Bn, 12th Marines (Rein) in general support of the Task Force for the remainder of the operation.

b. In addition, during the period 17-29 July 1966, 4.2 Mortar Battery, 1st Battalion, 11th Marines was in direct support of this battalion from positions located within the Bn CP (XD 983563). During the period, the battery fired 6500 rounds on 670 observed and unobserved missions. Initially, the battery's response to fire missions was considered slow; however, the more the battery fired, its response became quicker and more accurate.

c. During 29 July-1 August general support was provided the Task Force by 3rd Bn, 12th Marines (Rein). "I" Battery was located at the 2nd Battalion, 1st Marines Command Post with a mission to support Task Force DELTA with longer range fires than could be provided by the batteries located at CAM LO.

d. The night of 21-22 July 1966 was one of the most active for the FSCC and the battalion's supporting arms. At 2115H "H" Company reported receiving small arms fire from the north and the 4.2" mortar battery was called upon to silence it. Several minutes later "H" also reported very heavy movement and running to their south along a north-south stream and trail network which connected with "I" Company, 3rd Bn, 4th Marines to the south. The 81's were given the fire mission of sweeping along the trail between the two companies and expended approximately 100 rounds. Both of these missions were ended by 2210H. At 2220H "H" again reported movement on all sides and "I" Company, 3rd Bn, 4th Marines reported additional movement and digging sounds in the trail network to their north. The 4.2's began sweeping back and forth along the northern ridgeline while the 81's covered the west flank of "H" and the trail north of "H". Until about 0030H, the 4.2's and 81's were firing almost continuous missions at the heavy movement, VC small arms firing positions, and suspected mortar positions. Several times the batteries were required to fire several different missions simultaneously. During these peaks, all radio circuits available were utilized to adjust the fire. Several times there were two missions on the artillery net, one on battalion tactical net, and one or more over the 81's net all being conducted simultaneously. Missions were called and adjusted by 81 FO's, artillery FO's, and company commanders. The FSCC fired unobserved missions at possible escape routes and mortar positions whenever there was a break in observed missions. This multiple use artillery agencies and available radio circuits permitted considerable flexibility in meeting simultaneous threats to the battalion. However, the conduct of fire missions on the Battalion Tactical Net tended to tie this net up somewhat.

e. During the entire operation the Battalion was dependent upon helicopters for personnel movement and resupply. Generally, the support was satisfactory; however, more often than not the helicopters could not be relied upon to meet the pick-up time requested. Fixed wing, when requested, was responsive. However, 40-60 minutes were often required from the time of request until the aircraft were on station. The following is a detailed summary of air operations during the period 7 July - 3 August 1966:

- 7 July Two CH-46's and 2 UH-1E's used for reconnaissance overflight.
- Two UH-1E's used for radio relay.
- One CH-46 used for med evac of one US Ill.
- 8 July Three CH-46's and 2 UH-1E's used for reconnaissance platoon extraction.
- Two VF used for helicopter escort.
- Two CH-46's and 2 UH-1E's used for reconnaissance overflights.
- Three CH-46's and 2 UH-1E's used for insertion, immediate extraction, reinsertion, and again immediate extraction of recon platoon.
- Two CH-46's used to lift reaction force.
- Four VF's used for LZ CAP.
- One CH-46 and 2 UH-34's used for two med evac's for 3 WIA's.

7. Intelligence

a. Terrain

(1) The terrain between DONG HA and CAM LO is primarily a flat and open cultivated area, with populated areas concentrated astride the SONG CAM LO River. North of the 61 grid line the ground begins to form into low rolling hills covered with scrub growth and elephant grass. Commencing with the 10 grid line and continuing west from the piedmont, the terrain rises in a series of razor-back ridgelines to heights of up to 500 meters. The upper slopes of the ridges are covered with dense jungle growth and canopy. Foot movement is limited to the trails and dry stream beds scattered throughout the area.

(2) The area of operation in vicinity XD 9856 was situated in a "T" shaped valley encompassed by a series of razor-back, canopy-covered ridgelines reaching heights of 200 to 400 meters. The SONG THIRINH HIN River, flowing generally in a easterly direction through the area, is joined by the SONG CAM LO River. The SONG CAM LO cuts the western portion of the valley flowing in a southeast direction. Several small streams, originating in the surrounding ridgelines, flow into the SONG CAM LO River. Vegetation in the valley varies from 6-10 foot elephant grass in the southern sector to jungle underbrush on the lower slopes of the hills. Stream lines may be traced by the heavy ribbon of jungle undergrowth and canopy, which ranges from heights of 10 to 30 feet. Upon reaching the 100 meter height, the vegetation becomes heavy to impenetrable; the secondary growth reaches a height of 10 to 20 feet with the canopy climbing to heights of 50 feet and over. Foot movement is limited to existing trails throughout the canopy.

b. Enemy

(1) Indications that the enemy was active in the area of operations became apparent during the first week of July. Recon teams, attempting insertion, encountered groups of VC around the LZ; on several occasions, they met resistance within minutes after landing. The area of recon operations was generally in the vicinity of grid squares of YD 0056 and YD 0162. ARVN units, operating in the THON PHUONG AN (D-5) area (YD 0951), established contact with the enemy units up to regimental size. During the period 7-15 July, the combined actions of Marine and ARVN units established the probable routes of infiltration into the Province from the DMZ, occupied defensive areas, and the tentative identification of the enemy unit as being the 324B NVA Division.

(2) On 8 July the VC fired approximately 25 rounds of small arms fire into the left flank positions of an Echo Company ambush in their night time position in the vicinity of YD 117590. One hundred and fifty rounds of small arms fire were returned which resulted in the VC breaking contact.

(3) A sniper, located in the vicinity of YD 151601, - fired 7 rounds of small arms at random into Echo Company positions on 13 July and then withdrew.

(4) A reconnaissance team encountered 4 VC on 9 July while in an ambush position. The VC, in the vicinity of XD 995594, were fired on by the recon team resulting in 4 VC KIA. Before the VC bodies could be searched, 2 additional VC were observed and movement to the west of the recon team was heard. Due to the size of the recon team and the VC movement, extraction was accomplished. Patrol insertions by recon teams on 11, 12, and 13 July were limited to minor contacts and enemy sightings resulting in 4 VC WIA. During overflights and "feints" prior to insertions, moderate to heavy small arms and machine gun fire was encountered.

(5) Contact was not established by the battalion with NVA forces until the night of 16 July when elements of 2/1 received approximately 95 rounds of 81/82mm mortar fire from several guns located in the YD 0565 and YD 0665 grid squares.

(6) The morning of 17 July, the battalion was helo-lifted to the XD 9856 grid square without incident. Contact on 18 July was established by two platoons of Echo Company in separate patrol actions in the vicinity of XD 992549 and XD 998557. An active fire fight ensued in both platoon areas, resulting in 9 NVA KIA (confirmed), 17 NVA KIA (probable), 5 NVA WIA (confirmed), 1 AK-47, and 1 7.62 Goryunov Machine Gun captured in the vicinity of XD 992579. Patrol activity on 18 July by Hotel Company encountered several NVA. The NVA were taken under fire resulting in 1 NVA KIA (confirmed) 2 NVA KIA (probable), and the capture of 1 DPM (IMG) with 500 rounds of ammunition.

(7) During the search and destroy operation on 20 July along the ridgeline in the vicinity YD 003552, Echo Company encountered 3 NVA. Small arms fire by point elements resulted in 1 NVA WIA (confirmed) and the capture of several documents and medical equipment.

(8) Foxtrot Company, while enroute to their blocking position during the night 20-21 July, were fired on by 2 NVA with automatic weapons. The NVA hit two elements of Foxtrot at different locations along the trail in the vicinity of XD 995585. Small arms fire returned by Foxtrot resulted in 2 NVA KIA (probable). A search of the area the following morning resulted in one AK-47. Patrol activity on 21-22 July by Hotel Company units resulted in the locating of 5 NVA KIA, 4 of which were found in shallow graves. An ambush, initiated by Hotel Company during the night of 22 July, resulted in 1 NVA KIA (confirmed). Foxtrot patrol was fired on by an estimated 3 to 6 NVA during the morning hours of 22 July. The patrol returned fire and when the NVA broke contact, an artillery mission was called on the withdrawing NVA. The fire mission resulted in 1 NVA KIA (probable) and 1 NVA WIA (probable). The ambush set in by elements of Hotel Company during the hours of darkness on 23 July had contact with an estimated 4 NVA. Small arms fire by the ambush resulted in 4 NVA KIA (probable).

(9) On 24 July Hotel Company positions received approximately 200 rounds of small arms fire from an unknown number of NVA probing their positions. After contact was broken and the NVA withdrew, Hotel Company dispatched elements to search the area in the proximity of the probe. The search in the vicinity of YD 000602 resulted in 4 NVA KIA (confirmed), 5 AK-47, 15 magazines, and 7 Chicom grenades. Echo Company patrols and ambushes on the 24th of July established contact with the NVA. A search of the area of contact (XD 989597 to XD 989605) resulted in 3 NVA KIA (confirmed), 2 AK-47, 1 SKS Assault Rifle, 4 hand grenades (stick type) and 4 AK-47 magazines (full) and 90 rounds of loose ammunition.

(10) On 26 July "G" Company observed 3 NVA moving along a ridgeline and fired small arms and 60mm mortars at them. The following day (27 July), a Hotel Company patrol searching the area found a blood trail giving evidence of 1 NVA WIA (confirmed).

(11) The artillery battery (I/3/12) was probed on two separate occasions during the night of 28-29 July. The first group, estimated between 2-3 NVA, fired approximately 25 rounds of automatic fire into the battery positions. Shortly after midnight, a second probe by an estimated 6-8 NVA fired automatic weapons and threw grenades into the battery positions. On both occasions, small arms and machine gun fire forced the NVA to break contact and withdraw. A possible third group of NVA fired small arms into the Hotel Company positions while a Hotel Company ambush fired on an unknown number of NVA moving near the ambush site. Foxtrot Company patrol on 30 July, searching a NVA bivouac area, found 4 graves, each containing one NVA body.

At 0810H all units lifted from LZ ROBIN (YD 066655). At 0923H new CP located at XD 984563. At 0920H all units of 2/1 landed at new location: E Company at XD 988559, F Company at XD 975565 and H Company at XD 985574. At 1228H, 4.2"/1/11 in position at Bn C.P. At 1430H F/2 patrol sighted a VC sniper in a tree at XD 975574; patrol fired 40 rounds of small arms and 3 rounds of 81mm mortar. The area was searched with negative results. l. 18 July - Between 0515H and 0700H H/1 received 4 rounds of 81 or 82mm mortar fire and approximately 350 rounds of small arms fire both semi- and automatic weapons located in the vicinity XD 993585. LP's pulled in and artillery/mortar fire was brought on suspected positions. Mortar fire forced NVA to move and fire was adjusted accordingly. At 0620H one NVA squad was observed moving along streambed vicinity XD 995585; fire mission called. Area of these contacts swept by "M" Company after completion of fire missions. Results of the engagement: Two NVA KIA (probable), 1 DPM machine gun, 500 rounds 7.62mm ammunition, and various articles 782 gear captured. A considerable amount of blood found in the area. vicinity XD 996545. Receiving a heavy volume of automatic weapons fire, the platoon deployed and commenced the assault. A combination of heavy undergrowth and the well-positioned enemy machine gun slowed the attack. After calling an artillery mission, the platoon resumed the assault utilizing all its organic weapons and overran the enemy position. Results of the engagement: 3 NVA KIA (confirmed), including 1 officer; 6 NVA KIA (probable), 1 Goryunov machine gun (Chicom type), and 1 AK-47; friendly losses: DOW 8 WIA. At 1100H E/3, also a combat patrol, sweeping eastward along high ground vicinity XD 999558 made heavy contact at close quarters with an estimated NVA platoon reinforced with 2 and possibly 3 machine guns. The NVA opened fire from well concealed, dug-in positions at the edge of the canopy. E/3 returned fire and commenced the assault of the position. Suffering several casualties, E/3 held its position and called in 81mm and 4.2" mortar fire, which was walked down the ridgeline into the enemy position. One round of 4.2" WP forced 4 NVA to break from their position; they were killed by E/3's small-arms fire as soon as they were in the open. As the attack continued about 25-30 NVA were observed moving from the south to reinforce the enemy position. As the direction of their movement would have cut off the main body of E/3 from the covered area where the platoon had assembled its wounded, the platoon moved to cover the wounded and called artillery missions on both enemy threats. At that time due to both heat and battle casualties, the platoon was reduced to an effective strength of 20. The wounded were medevaced and the main body fell back to make full utilization of all supporting arms. Air (including napalm), artillery, and mortar fires were brought to bear against the enemy positions with very effective coverage. A later sweep of the area revealed well-dug-in, mutually supporting positions. Results of the engagement were: Friendly, 8 WIA, 5 heat casualties; 6 NVA KIA (confirmed), 12 NVA KIA (probable). At 1020H H/1 patrol found a company/battalion camp site in the vicinity of XD 982582. There were numerous fighting holes, bomb shelters, tables, chairs, and an altar. It was estimated that this position had been occupied during the past two days. At 1130H the patrol located a suspected command bunker at XD 995584 surrounded by 6 fighting holes. An ammo bunker showing signs of recent use was also found. At 1815H "H" Company sighted 67 NVA moving inside the tree line at XD 979588. A fire mission was called forcing the NVA back into the canopy with unknown casualties. At 2110H "H" OP # 4 heard sound of heavy enemy movement at XD 989588. OP fired small arms and threw grenades; noises ceased. At 2153H "H" OP # 1 heard heavy movement along stream bed and around canopy in vicinity XD 985583. At same time M/3/4 noted heavy movement to northwest and north. The sound of metal striking metal (suspected mortar position) was also noted. 81mm mortar mission called and movement ceased. This movement to and fro (north and south) along the streambed trail seemed to indicate that an unknown number of NVA were moving back and forth attempting to escape the artillery fire. Mortar/artillery fire was continually adjusted to cut off their escape or drive them into friendly lines. At 2148H H Company received 82mm mortar fire from north. At 2155H H Company directed mortar mission on target at XD 995605 with "F" Company FO observing. At 2210H mortar attack against "H" Company ceased. p. 22 July - By 0030H the attacks against "F" and "H" Companies had gradually subsided. (See paragraph 6d., for discussion of artillery support during this period). From the enemy's action it was apparent that the NVA forces were making a concerted effort to eliminate the blocking positions (XD 990598 and YD 004598) manned by "F" and "H" Companies. As the attack progressed it appeared to become increasingly disorganized giving proof to the success of the battalions' actions. At 0100H "H" Company requested med evac for 3 WIA's.

c. Communications

(1) General. Operation HASTINGS was conducted in two phases by this unit. The first phase consisted of the defensive mission at DONG HA and CAN LO while the second phase was the committing of this unit to the offensive portion of the Operation HASTINGS. As these phases reflect diversified communications requirements, they are covered as such in this report.

(2) Phase One - Defensive mission at DONG HA and CAN LO:

(a) Radio

1. Internal. Internal Battalion communications posed no problems and communications were established in accordance with normal unit operating procedures.

2. External

a. In order to expand the external communications system, a Communications Central, TSC-15, was activated to provide a voice and teletype circuit between DONG HA and the Fourth Marines at PHU BAI. This system proved to be very unstable and, therefore, not acceptable. Initially, the problem lay in insufficient equipment to establish the teletype circuit. Additional equipment was obtained from the 4th Marines. However, after another equipment failure there was insufficient equipment to continue this circuit. The Third MarDiv was requested to provide both technical and equipment assistance, which was quickly received. Repeated efforts to establish a stable and reliable circuit to PHU BAI were unsuccessful, and it was, therefore, decided to attempt to establish this circuit direct to the Third MarDiv at DA NANG. Although the circuit was now becoming acceptable, an unusual number of equipment failures began to occur. Additional equipment and technical assistance were employed at both terminal units until the equipment problems began to be resolved about 14 July. From this point on, the only problem encountered was with frequencies which were not considered to be beyond acceptable limits. It should be noted that experience with high frequency single side band communications equipment in and around the PHU BAI area has always reflected an unacceptable response. It has continually been easier to establish and maintain this type of radio communications with DA NANG than to communicate with PHU BAI. As of this time no satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon can be advanced.

b. A secondary external communications circuit was established by laying two trunk lines to the Air Force Switchboard at DONG HA. This provided two telephone circuits to HUE, PHU BAI and DA NANG. Unfortunately, the Air Force was experiencing similar difficulties with their radio telephone circuits and these were not considered reliable.

c. A tertiary means of communication was established with the Fourth Marines at PHU BAI by radio. Again, the high frequency circuit in and out of the PHU BAI Combat Base was not sufficiently reliable to provide 24 hour communications.

(b) Wire. Normal wire communications were established and maintained with no difficulties encountered.

(c) Message Center Operations. This unit provided normal message center facilities for Battalion; later the LSA unit superimposed itself on the Battalion Command Post. It is to be noted that during this operation, the battalion message center maintained two message centers: one at the GIA LE Command Post and one at DONG HA. This dual operational requirement tended to over-extend a small, eight-man section both in personnel and equipment. This problem is best alleviated by having an MOS cross-training program in effect which will allow the utilization of personnel of the other sections in the message center.

(3) Phase Two - Offensive Phase of Operation HASTINGS

(a) Radio

1. Radio communications were established and maintained with a minimum of difficulty.

2. One difficulty noted however, was the tendency to operate the companies to the limits of AN/PRC-25 range. This tended to out-distance the capability of the PRC-10 with the 81mm FO Teams and the PRC-9 of the Artillery FO Teams. Until the receipt of the full T/E allowance of AN/PRC-25's, this will continue to be a problem requiring close attention.

(b) Wire. Limited wire communication was employed during this phase of Operation HASTINGS.

(c) Message Center Operations. (See Phase One).

UNCLASSIFIED

13. Special Equipment and Techniques. None employed.

14. Commander's Analysis

a. One serious failing throughout the operation and especially during that phase in which this unit was committed was the complete lack of information flowing down from higher headquarters. No OpSums and only a few IntSums were received. This resulted in this unit operating in a partial vacuum. Daily visits by CG TF DELTA and principal staff members tended to alleviate the situation.

b. No significant difficulties which can not be corrected at the local level were encountered during the operation.

c. Lessons Learned

(1) The 60mm mortar proved invaluable both in the offense and defense. It was useful for providing "reconnaissance by fire" and "prep fires" during a company's advance. It was also very useful in covering avenues of approach into a company's position which were otherwise difficult to cover. Its effectiveness was limited, however, when the unit moved into the canopy.

(2) The use of booby traps - emplaced and removed during the hours of darkness - around a company position were found to be very useful in signaling the approach of the enemy. These can be either prepared items or improvised from flares, hand grenades, etc.

(3) While the canopy restricted all radios, the AN/PRC-25 proved the more reliable. The AN/PRC-10 radio could not be depended on to penetrate the canopy.

(4) It was noted that likely ambush sites along trails appeared to be occasionally marked by small (one foot in length) sticks laid across the trail.

(5) Whenever feasible, giving the company commanders as much freedom of action as possible within his assigned zone provides him considerable choice of movement in the conduct of search and destroy operations. It allows him to capitalize on the unit's strong points and minimize the weakness. This, in conjunction with a coordinated patrol effort, provides excellent coverage of a large area.

(2) The use of booby traps - emplaced and removed during the hours of darkness - around a company position were found to be very useful in signaling the approach of the enemy.

UNCLASSIFIED

(6) The absolute necessity of responding to any NVA contact with an immediate and large volume of fire was consistently demonstrated throughout the operation.

d. Psychological Warfare Activities were of two types: formal pre-planned broadcasts and leaflet drops from aircraft and improvised signs placed in known NVA harboring areas by one of the rifle companies. The aircraft broadcasts and leaflet drops which were provided by TF DELTA on several occasions during the course of the operation covered the area very well. The broadcasts could be heard rather well and were understandable. The leaflets blanketed the area and many torn-up ones were found throughout. One of the companies provided signs which they placed throughout the area. No evaluation can be made as to the effectiveness of the Psy War effort inasmuch as no captives were taken by the battalion.

15. Recommendations: The forces participating in this operation now have a good knowledge of the area and the suspected enemy positions within it. As of this date there are already indications that the NVA is flowing back into the vacuum created by the withdrawal of Task Force DELTA forces. Therefore, it is recommended that the long range reconnaissance effort in this area be continued and that at appropriate times and locations Marine infantry battalions with suitable supporting arms be employed in this area to deny the NVA freedom of movement and to keep him off balance.
