Emotion

By Eugene A Santoro

12-15-2010

The byproduct of emotion may be blushing, embarrassment, shaking, anger, weak knees, crying, loss of memory, stuttering, sweating etc. Many years ago, two emotions were taboo to one's manly hood; you never would want someone to see you blush or cry.

Isn't it a shame that one's show of emotion is considered a weakness? When I was a teenager, if blushing or tears were detected by a friend, a peer, and sometimes even a complete stranger, one would expect to be harassed and I mean cruel and inhumane punishment. Things sure haven't changed; Presidents have cried in public, Glen Beck has been laughed at for his show of emotion. Now, the new speaker of the house John Boehner of Ohio is being used for entertainment on many comedy and talk shows for his uncontrollable show of emotion.

Have we not seen ball-players weep after winning or losing a game? Have you ever cried during a movie?

With so much going on in the world, is a man, who cries, really all they have to talk about?

When one shows emotion, it is a sign of passion. We do not know what pain one is re-living. If we laugh at people who show their emotions, how far are we away from laughing at people who are different, handicapped, destitute, and unfortunate?

Hey, look at that guy drooling, ain't that hilarious?

Obama Admin Working to Rescind Conscience Rights on

Abortion

The Obama administration is still working to overturn conscience rights for medical professionals on abortion that were put in place at the tail end of the Bush administration.

In 2008, the Bush administration issued a rule that prohibited recipients of federal money from discriminating against doctors, nurses and health care aides who refuse to take part in medical procedures to which they have religious or moral objections, such as abortion.

The rule implemented existing conscience protection laws that ensure medical professionals cannot be denied employment because they do not want to assist in abortions.

New information about the state of those protections and efforts to repeal them comes from legal papers the administration filed in a case the state of Connecticut launched against the conscience protections. In a document filed in federal court in November, Obama administration attorneys admitted that the administration wants to finalize a rescission of the conscience rules but has been delayed because of other business — likely due to the HHS working on implementing the provisions of the ObamaCare law.

Doctors Say Adult Stem Cell Research Cures HIV-Positive Man

Doctors in Germany say they have cured an American living there who has the HIV/AIDS virus by using a treatment based on adult stem cells, the more ethical form of stem cell research.

In 2008, German doctors reported they had used a selective adult stem cell transplant to treat a leukemia patient. The treatment had a side effect that the transplant also removed his HIV infection.

After the transplant, the virus was undetectable in his bloodstream for at least two years and he no longer took antiretroviral drugs.

Now, doctors have revealed the name of the patient Timothy Ray Brown, an HIV-positive man and they are claiming the results with this patient provide evidence for a cure for HIV infection using the selective adult stem cell transplant.

Publishing their results in the medical journal Blood, they say, "In conclusion, our results strongly suggest that cure of HIV has been achieved in this patient."

Pro-Life Womens Leader Debates Ex-

Planned Parenthood Prez

Penny Nance, the pro-life leader of Concerned Women for America, faced off today against former Planned Parenthood president Gloria Feldt in a several minute debate on MSNBC.

The television station led the package with a preview of the battles in the coming Congress — where pro-life advocates have higher numbers than ever before. MSNBC asked Nance what the new chairman of the health subcommittee that will begin the review and potential dismantling of the abortion-funding ObamaCare bill meant to the pro-life movement.

"Joe Pitts will be the new chairman of the health subcommittee and you've got to understand that Joe has the job because American women by 15 points swung in this past election for this Congress," the CWA leader said.

□We have a pro-life House of Representatives. We have a pro-life House leadership. And we have 12 new senators who are pro-life.□
□Yes that's going to change the dynamics on Capitol Hill,□ Nance added. □It's a new day in America and we can't continue to fund Planned Parenthood.□

Americans Oppose Pro-Abortion ObamaCare as Judge Rules

As a federal judge issued a ruling declaring a portion of the abortion-funding ObamaCare law unconstitutional because of the individual mandate, new polls show support for the law at low levels. The key issue in the complaint the state of Virginia filed is that the individual mandate in the law, requiring Americans to purchase health insurance (which may very well fund abortions) is unconstitutional and a violation of the power Congress has to regulate interstate commerce.

Yesterday, Judge Henry Hudson issued a 42-page opinion writing that the individual mandate exceeds Congress' authority, saying it is "neither within the letter nor the spirit of the Constitution."

Also yesterday, an ABC News/Washington Post poll found support for the ObamaCare law at its lowest levels ever. Support for ObamaCare peaked at 48 percent in November 2009 and now stands at just 43 percent with 52 percent of Americans opposing it. The nine point percentage on the opposition side is also the biggest gap in the poll since the health care debate began in earnest last summer.

University of Wisconsin Stops Plan for Second-Term Abortions

The University of Wisconsin Hospital and Clinics stopped a controversial plan to do second-trimester abortions at the Madison Surgery Center after ongoing protests from pro-life organizations.

Citing safety and privacy of patients as the main reason, officials made the announcement late Monday.

In February 2009, the Board of the University of Wisconsin Hospital and Clinics approved a plan to create a second trimester abortion facility to be located at 1 S. Park St in Madison. The plan called for approximately 125 abortions annually on women whose unborn children are about 19 to 22 weeks along.

Doctors at UW decided to put the abortion business together after the retirement of Dennis Christensen, who had done the second trimester abortions at the Planned Parenthood center in Madison until he retired in December 2008.

Newsweek Names Pro-Life Women's Group Prez a New Christian Leader

by Steven Ertelt / Washington, DC /

LifeNews.com / 12/14/10

*2:36 P*n a new article on what Newsweek terms the "religious right," the news magazine has included the president of a pro-life women's group as one of the top 10 leaders of the second generation of Christian conservatives.

The magazine included Marjorie Dannenfelser, the president of the Susan B. Anthony List.

Dannenfelser leads an organization that isn't explicitly religious but draws its support from many conservative Christians. Once a pro-choice, moderate Republican, Dannenfelser about-faced in college, becoming anti-abortion at the same time she left the Episcopal Church to become a Catholic.

Today, she heads the Susan B. Anthony List, which she founded out of her house in 1991. The political-action committee, which gives money to pro-life candidates, has quietly become one of the nation's preeminent anti-abortion groups, making it the standard-bearer for one of the religious right's central issues. And she has the ear of evangelical rock star and potential 2012 candidate Sarah Palin, who headlined an SBA List fundraiser in May 2010.

Jill Stanek, a pro-life nurse and blogger, noted the honor and said it is well deserved.

Congratulations to Marjorie Dannenfelser, founder and president of the Susan B. Anthony List, for receiving recognition she deserves, particularly after her group's amazing success during the 2010 election season.

Marjorie stands out as being the only person listed whose total focus is the pro-life issue.

Stanek also noted that Newsweek included Jim Wallis of Sojourners on the list, even though is one of the "evangelical left" who act as Obama apologists even though the president is strongly pro-abortion and violates pro-life Christian and Catholic Church teachings.

Newsweek also named Robert George, a pro-life professor at Princeton University who has been responsible for pro-life legislation such as the Born Alive Infants Protection Act and the Manhattan Declaration, and Tony Perkins, the president of the Family Research Council, as top leaders and representatives of the modern-day values voters.

Alaska Judge Weakens Parental Notification on Abortion Law

An Alaska judge issued a ruling on Monday that allows a parental notification law to stand but weakened it to the point that pro-life groups say it is now ineffective. Superior Court Judge John Suddock ruled the new parental notification law state voters approved can stand, but he said abortion practitioners should not face prison sentences for failing to comply with it. He also removed a section allowing parents to file a civil lawsuit against abortion practitioners who don't comply seeking financial damages.

The law calls for a fine of up to $1,000 and imprisonment of up to five years when abortion practitioners keep parents out of their daughters abortion.

Secretariat Movie Reminds of Daughters Missing After Abortions

There is a heartbreaking scene in the movie Secretariat, where the main character, Penny, is unable to attend her daughter's performance because of another commitment her commitment to save the family horse farm and shepherd the race-horse Secretariat to victory.

Penny is on the phone with her son, who is attending his sister's play. He holds the receiver up, so that Penny can hear her beloved daughter sing "Silent Night." She lies across her bed, sobbing, because she is unable to be with her daughter on her big night. Actress Diane Lane expertly projects her character's grief, showing her to be inconsolable because of her separation from her teenage girl. In watching that scene, I couldn't help but think of the pain of women who will never hear their daughters sing Christmas carols let alone see them perform. Their separation from their daughters represents a life term in an emotional prison constructed by the abortion industry.

Washington Doctor Fined for Doing Abortion on Secret Lover
by Steven Ertelt / Aberdeen, WA / LifeNews.com / 12/14/10 8:04 PM

A Washington state doctor has been disciplined by the state health department for doing an abortion on a secret lover who was a co-worker at Providence Centralia Hospital with him in 2006.

John Eiland will get to keep his medical license after he was investigated over the abortion, but he will pay a fine, be required to attend ethics training, and be placed on probation for three years.

Eiland currently works at the Grays Harbor Women's Clinic west of Seattle near the Pacific coast where he is an obstetrician and gynecologist.

He admitted misconduct in the case, the Associated Press reports, and he will pay a $3,000 fine after the state health department filed a case against him in February. He failed to refer the woman on whom he did the abortion to another physician or keep medical records related to the procedure.

Although Eiland apparently did the abortion on his lover with her consent, doctors who have impregnated their loved have not always done that.

Last year, a British physician was found guilty of attempting to poison a former lover in a bid to cause her to have an abortion and he received six years in prison after a trial.

Edward Erin, a hospital consultant, attempted to poison Bella Prowse and force her to have an abortion without her knowledge.

Erin attempted to poison Prowse on three separate occasions in early February 2008, officials said. They indicated he used the drugs methotrexate and diclofenac in the abortion bid and tried to administer them once at her home by putting the drugs in a tea he made for her.

In October, 2009, Erin, 44, of Kensington and a married father of two, was convicted as a jury found him guilty of two charges of attempting to poison Prowse in two of the three instances but did not convict him of attempting to cause an abortion without her consent.

During sentencing, according to the BBC, Judge Richard Hone called Erin “a liar, a cheat and a predator” and said he engaged in actions that “betrayed his profession and his family.”

Irish Humor

Paddy was driving down the street in a sweat because he had an important meeting and could not find a parking place. Looking up to heaven he said, “Lord take pity on me. If you find me a parking place I will go to Mass every Sunday for the rest of my life and give up my Irish Whiskey!”

Miraculously, a parking place appeared. Paddy looked up again and said, “Never mind, I found one.”

Gallagher opened the morning newspaper and was dumbfounded to read in the obituary column that he had died. He quickly phoned his best friend, Finney. “did you see the paper?” Asked Gallagher. “They said I died!!!” “Yes, I saw it” says Finney. “Where are ye callin’ from?”

Walking into the pub, Mike says to Charlie the bartender, “Pour me a stiff one-Just had another fight with the little women.” “Oh Yeah?” says Charlie, “And how did this one end?” “When it was over, Mike replied, “She came to me on her hands and knees.” “Really, says Charlie, “Now that’s a switch! What did she say?” She says to me,

“Come out from under that bed you little chicken.”
Paddy was in New York. He was patiently waiting and watching the traffic cop on a busy street crossing. The cop stopped the flow of traffic and shouted, “Ok pedestrians.” Then he’d allow the traffic to pass. He’d done this several times, and Paddy still stood on the sidewalk. After the cop had shouted, “Pedestrians!” for the tenth time, Paddy went over to him and said, “is it not about time ye let the Catholics across?”

An Irish priest is driving down to New York and is stopped for speeding in Connecticut. The state trooper smells alcohol on the priest’s breath and then sees an empty wine bottle on the floor of the car. Her says, “Sir, have you been drinking?” “Just water”, says the priest.

The trooper says, “Then why do I smell wine?” The priest looks at the bottle and says, “Good Lord! He has done it again.”

Father Murphy walks into a pub in Donegal, and says to the first man he meets, “Do you want to go to heaven?” The man says, I do Father.” The priest says, “Then stand over there against the wall.” Then the priest asked the second man “Do you want to go to Heaven?” “Certainly, Father,” was the man’s reply. “Then stand over there against the wall,” says the priest. Then Father Murphy walked up to O’Toole and says, Do you want to go to Heaven?” O’Toole says, No, I don’t Father.” The priest says, “Oh, when you die you do not want to go to Heaven?” O’Toole says, “Oh, when I die, yes. I thought you were getting a group together to
